WELCOME BACK COTTAGERS!

And welcome everyone to the first edition of the Haliburton County Echo which has a full colour picture!

That's right... Even though we've been "The Voice of the Highlands Since 1882", we've never before accompanied that voice with a colour picture. But with the launch of the "new and improved" County Life, we decided to make a splash. And so we got twins Lindsay and Danielle Casey to sit on the dock at their Lake Kashagawigamog home, in spite of the fact the ice had only left the lake a little more than a week earlier! (For those who missed it, Danielle, Lindsay and two of their friends went swimming the previous week, going under three times. Brrrrr...)

There's so much richness to life in the Highlands, both culturally and naturally, and we hope County Life will become your weekly guide for exploration.

We hope that as you read through the pages of County Life, you enjoy the changes we've made. Our goal is to make it more "interactive". We want you to do things with the paper before you recycle it - do a crossword puzzle, plant a garden, taste-test a recipe, figure out what to do next weekend and discover something new about the places and people in Haliburton County.

There's so much richness to life in the Highlands, both culturally and naturally, and we hope County Life will become your weekly guide for exploration. There will be a brief hiatus until our next publication in June, but then we'll be back every week, with lots more ideas of what to do, in July and August.

Meanwhile, please let us know what you'd like to see in County Life. Do you have any photos which capture the spirit of summer in the Highlands? What about a story to tell, a neighbour you're proud of, a place to share with others? Please phone Editor Martha Perkins, 457-1037, or drop by our office at the corner of York and Maple (below the CIBC and Ethel Curry Gallery) in Haliburton. Enjoy!

New Moose Woods trail system gives mountain bike enthusiasts a chance to experience Haliburton's wilderness by bike

by JODY LINDBECK
Staff Reporter

Bicycle riding is one of those activities which is virtually impossible not to enjoy.

And when it's riding a mountain bike along a track through the woods on a warm day, it is impossible not to find the experience pleasant.

The Moose Heads Trail Centre will open to the public on June 8, with mountain bike riding and hiking during the summer months and cross-country skiing and snowshoeing planned for winter.

In preparation for the official opening, we at The Echo were given the opportunity to see the trails in the way in which they should be seen - from the back of a mountain bike.

Now, it must be pointed out right at the beginning that after nine years of working at what was primarily a desk job, describing me as a little out of shape is a vast understatement.

Despite this, I can honestly say cycling along the mountain trails was great fun.

The other four members of our party were all in much better shape and rode on ahead, every so often waiting for me to come trundling along behind them.

I actually think stopping fairly frequently was an advantage because I got to see a pond where beavers had been hard at work, and was able to spot the tracks of several animals.

Had I been zooming past at high speed, I just would not have noticed these things - would I?

One piece of advice though: bike helmets are required by law and are always a good idea anyway. Anyone who doesn't have a helmet will be able to hire (that's rent in "Canadian") one.

Moose Woods Trail Centre will have about 30 kilometres of trail for mountain bike riding, while in the winter months there will be 17 kilometres for cross-country skiing.

And with 1700 acres in total, there is plenty of room for future expansion.

Moose Woods is being developed by Wolf, Elke and Gesa Fluegel and Markus Carl.

Markus said they began working on the project 18 months ago.

Having hiked, cycled and skied through the property for many years, Markus saw "lots of potential" for a development such as a Moose Woods.

He said there was growing interest in mountain biking, which is being featured as a sport for the first time during the Olympic Games at Atlanta.

The development of Moose Woods has the full support of Peter Schleifenbaum of Haliburton Forest, where mountain biking trails are also open.

Markus envisages the two facilities operating trails which complement each other. People can spend time at Moose Woods, then moving on to cycle along the trails at Haliburton Forest.

And, importantly for Haliburton, there are now two facilities to draw people to the region, Markus said.

When Moose Woods opens, there will be mountain bike and helmet hire, with those all important drinks also available (and believe me, after cycling for what seemed like miles, a drink was definitely a good idea).

All of the trails will be marked out, with maps and brochures showing the trails, which will vary in levels of difficulty. Along the trails will also be strategically placed rest stops.

Markus believes many holiday makers are looking to do more with their vacation than spend every day lounging around. Activities such as golf, fishing, walking and cycling are environmentally-friendly and do not rely on technology to provide fun.

He believes Moose Woods meets the growing demand for this type of activity.

Moose Woods Trail Centre is located eight kilometres from Haliburton village, off County Road 14.

It will be open seven days a week. From Monday to Thursday, the hours will be 10:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m., on Friday and Saturday from 9:00 a.m. to 7:00 p.m. and Sunday from 9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m.

There is also a drop-off box to allow visitors to purchase their tickets outside these hours.

Mountain biking for adults will cost $5 for a day, or $50 for a season pass. For families, the cost is $12 per day, or $120 per season. The cost for students is $4 per day, or $40 per season, with the group rate at $3.50 each per day.

Mountain bikes and helmets will also be available for rental.

For hiking, the cost for adults is $2 per day, for families it is $5 per day and for groups it is $1.50 each per day.

On June 8, when Moose Woods Trail Centre opens, there will be free trail hire and refreshments. Similar activities are planned to mark the grand opening on June 23.

An exhilarating ride for experts, but easy routes will appeal to families

Glorious Music:

ELIJAH

by

Felix Mendelssohn Bartholdy.

Introduction.

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

THERE'S A DIFFERENCE between being tone deaf and not being able to carry a note. When you're tone deaf, you can't appreciate what other people are singing. When you can't carry a note, you appreciate other people's desire not to hear you prove the point.

So when Melissa Stevens phoned with an invitation to sing along with the Messiah Choir at a practice for the upcoming performance of Elijah, the singing part was gratefully declined. (We won't say who was the most grateful.) But not being tone deaf, it was an opportunity to sit among the choir as they tackled what some choir members think is their most challenging piece yet.

To put it simply, Elijah is like a round, but it's not like anything you'd hear around a campfire. Mendelssohn's masterpiece is as similar to Row, Row, Row Your Boat as a piece of stale bread is to a sumptuous wedding cake.

If you were to take a "CatScan" of one brief moment in the oratorio, you may find eight different notes we have eight different words going on, not often, and that's what causes some of the muddle."

Oh, that's fine then.

Supreme concentration is needed to keep in the right part because to remain part of the audience. It's hard work to be in the Messiah Choir, which practises for months in advance of the performance, and while it must be nice to relieve tension and stress by belting out all those notes, and you can still appreciate the music by remaining blissfully silent.

Elijah is being performed Saturday, May 25 at Haliburton Legion and Sunday, May 26 at Archie Stouffer Elementary School in Minden. Both concerts start at 7:30 p.m. and have reserved seating. Since many previous concerts have been sold out - there have even been scalpers-, you're advised to get your tickets early. Tickets, which are $10, are available at Nancy's Flowers in Haliburton and Minden IDA.

layered one on top of another. It's therefore not surprising that during a lull, one of the choir members says meekly to Stevens "while you're on the altos, we're in major difficulties on the bottom of page 29 and top of 30."

As if to make the choir feel better, Stevens smiles and says "sometimes the person beside you might be singing the same notes, but those beside, in front of and behind you may be in a different key altogether and singing an entirely different word. It's when you stand back that you are struck by the beauty and power of the combined voices.

Elusive Fishers exciting to see

Despite their name, Fishers do not catch fish, and they spend little time in the water. Instead, they prey on porcupines and other small mammals

by ARCHIE BRIGGS
Gooderham

While many people have never heard of a fisher let alone seen one, they are not uncommon in Haliburton County. The fact that they are solitary animals who prefer deep forest unpopulated by humans accounts in part for the rarity of sightings. As well, their senses of sight, smell and hearing are extremely good and this, combined with their habit of standing straight up on their hind legs, or running up a tree to observe their surroundings, gives them an advantage in remaining undetected.

When cornered the fisher will snarl and hiss much like a cat. If disturbed in their den they give a low grunting sound. With their sharp claws and teeth a fisher is a formidable adversary.

The fisher is one of the largest members of the weasel family. Females range from 30 to 40 inches with males being 35 to 50

A quiet stroll along any Highlands stream may afford you a glimpse of a Fisher inches, and ranging from six to 12 pounds. Their busy tail accounts for about a third of the length. The colour is dark brown verging on black with a lighter brown face and upper neck, particularly on the males, and there is generally a white marking on the chest. The head is broad with small ears. They have a bounding gait leaving matching footprints 18 to 50 inches apart.

Contrary to what the name implies the fisher does not catch fish, nor does it spend a lot of time in the water. Porcupines are their main source of food when available, however, they eat rodents, rabbits, carrion, plants and other food.

Fishers tend to travel a range of 50 to 150 square miles and, except for denning to have their young, use only temporary shelter in brush piles, under rocks or in snow banks.

The kits, usually three, are born in March or April in a hollow tree well above the ground, and stay with the mother about six months.

Although solitary by nature, the fisher's curiosity and appetite make it easy to trap. This, combined with its valuable fur, can readily lead to a rapid decimation of this sleek animal in an area.

While the chances of seeing a fisher are not high, the wonder and excitement of a sighting make the search well worthwhile. A quiet stroll along a secluded stream or around a beaver pond anywhere in Haliburton County can bring this reward that is not soon forgotten.

Any information on fisher sightings that readers wish to pass on would be greatly appreciated.

For fisher or other nature photos, please call Archie Briggs at 447-3241. They are also available at the Rails' End Gallery.

It's no doubt tribute to a pioneering heritage that so many Highland home-owners have chosen to hew their yards out of the wilderness. However, consequent attempts to cultivate this "cleared bush lot" have driven more frustrated would-be gardeners to seek professional help before they kill again, than any other single scenario.

If this all sounds too familiar, take heart — these gardening conditions present limitations, but the judicious application of equal parts self-control and science can keep casualties to a minimum.

First, come to terms with your light supply. Plant species with "full sun" requirements need eight to 12 hours of direct, unfiltered sunlight per day. Cleared bush lots with tall encircling trees can rarely meet this standard. Therefore, take yourself firmly in hand, and renounce, once and for all, visions of sun-drenched tomatoes and towering sunflowers. Some vegetables (lettuce, peas, spinach etc.) will manage in partial shade and if you have a sunny patio or deck, and are willing to lug things about in pursuit of sunbeams, container gardening can accommodate more light-loving flowers and produce. Generally though, shade tolerant varieties are your best bets.

Now consider your soil. For the most part, Haliburton County sits on granite. This, plus the accumulation of leaf mulch, tends to create acid soil—on average, the pH is a shocking 5.3 (anything below 7 is acid; above, alkaline). The average plant prefers something between 6 and 8. The good news is that average Haliburton soils are a loam texture, with good moisture retention and nutrient content. With appropriate plant selection, gardening potential is excellent.

The only reliable way to assess soil acidity is to have it tested—the average is 5.3 but variations are the norm. Local garden centres often offer soil test services for a of plants which will tolerate these conditions. The more severely acidic your soil (e.g. pH < 6.2) the fewer compatible species are available, and the more likely you are to want to tinker with it. Alkalinizing agents, such as ground limestone, will neutralize or raise the pH of acid soil. However, the amount required to effect change depends on the buffer capacity of your soil. This varies with soil composition. Measures required to correctly adjust the pH of a well buffered soil may turn another into an alkaline desert. Ask specifically for a buffer pH analysis and recommendations for types and amounts of corrective agents.

Based on a sample case of a partially shaded lot, moderately acidic soil (pH > 6.2 corrected or natural) and a modest fee, and the Ministry of Agriculture office in Lindsay (322 Kent St. W.) will supply collection kits and a list of test laboratory addresses. Be sure to sample several locations—soil conditions can change significantly over short distances.

Mild to moderately acid soils are fairly easy to live with—there being a reasonable range hardiness zone of 4, the following plants choices can be recommended. For ground-cover, consider pachysandra, periwinkle, clover, Virginia creeper or wintergreen. Shrubs which should hold their own include cotoneaster, hi-bush cranberry, European snowball, hydrangea, dogwood, spirea, elderberry or honeysuckle. For perennials, lungwort, wild violet, true lilies, day lilies, lily of the valley*, ostrich fern, columbine (aquilegia) bleeding heart, hostas, iris, astilbe, foxglove*, (*toxic plants) and globeflower are all reasonable choices. Begonias and impatiens are likely annuals. Cedar, mugho pine, yew and native hemlock are suitable larger trees.

While, admittedly, the "full sun" gardens featured in seed catalogues centre folds possess a certain gaudy charm, (especially in February) what you really want, on a dusty, scorching August afternoon, is a cool, green retreat. Come to terms with your shade conditions and soil characteristics, and your bush lot can supply just that.

Battling an environmental enemy

Purple loosestrife threatens wetlands wherever it takes hold, and the Haliburton Highlands are not immune to the plant's tenacious advance. Dorest resident Peggy Peterson believes that all of us should take action before it's too late

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

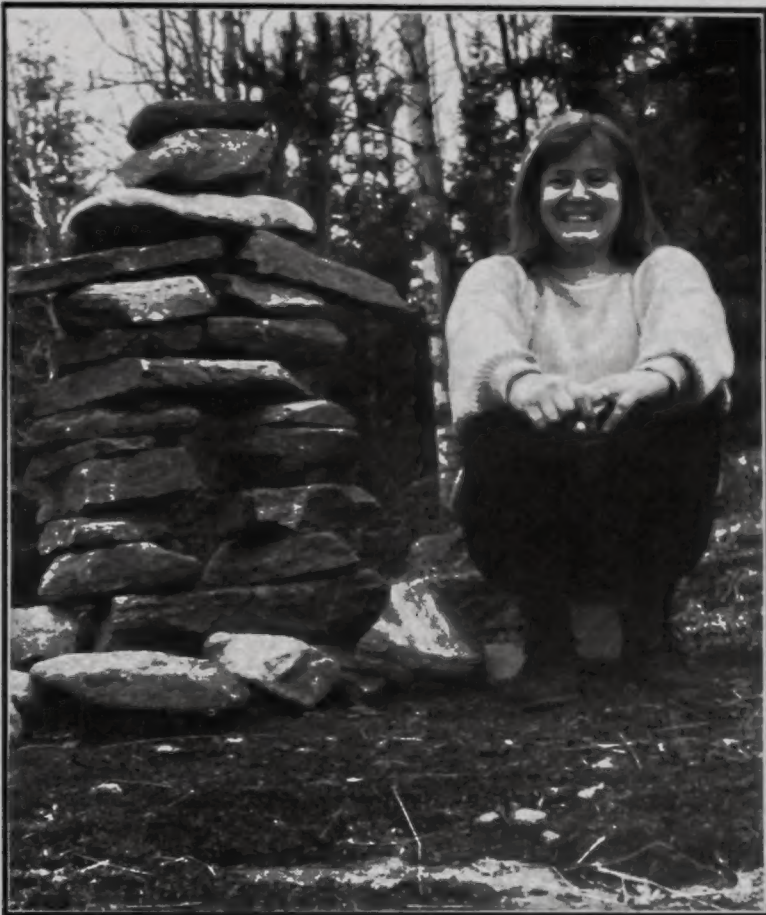

PEGGY PETERSON'S credentials as a naturalist aren't found hanging on the wall of her log home. Look out a window, however, and they're everywhere.

At her botanical garden just north of Dorset, she's got 250 varieties of perennials, all growing bio-dynamically, the "holistic" approach to gardening. When she shows you pictures of last year's showcase of colour, it's as if she was a grandmother cooing over her little darlings, each one special and beautiful. She's got an unspoken agreement with the animals that surround her house: they don't eat her plants for lunch, she won't eat the animals for dinner. Instead of using chemical-laden bug sprays, when she's puttering away in the middle of blackfly season, she keeps the bugs away by lighting a small, smoky fire called a smudge. So when Peggy Peterson begins a crusade against a plant, you know this is serious.

She would like to wipe out the purple loosestrife before it wipes out all of her other beloved plants. "People don't realize how ruthless it is," she says one early spring day. Beautiful to look at and sometimes sold as an ornamental plant, "once it gets established, it's impossible to get rid of." In one place in Burlington it's taken every bit of water and ponds dried up. For those who think the purple loosestrife can't thrive in the rugged Canadian Shield, Peterson says Powassan has been overtaken by the purple menace. One friend continued on page 10

Tactic: Dig out and destroy

planted a loosestrife in the spring, realized the damage she could cause in the fall and dug it out immediately. Nonetheless, the next spring, seven new plants sprung to life.

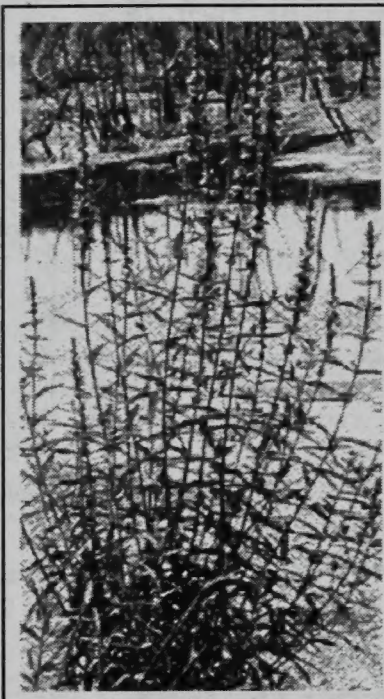

Because there are purple loosestrife beginning to grow in the marshes along the highway near her home, Peterson thinks something has to be done. Now. Before purple loosestrife's tenacious root system chokes the life out of other plants.

But right now, she's just a one-woman army and since one purple loosestrife plant can produce 2.7-million seeds a year, she needs a lot more help to even the odds.

After a winter of being buried under bureaucratic red tape, she, like her flowers, is ready to spring into action. "I have this paper trail which goes around in a circle," she says of her quest to get government ministries to get involved. At one point, she had three garbage bags full of just the blossoms, but office after office, ministry after ministry, no one could help. It was always someone else's responsibility.

"I could have been an environmental terrorist" (if she had opened the bags near a swamp)," she smiles ruefully.

Suffice to say that no matter which official in which capacity she tells about the purple loosestrife, no one actually goes out and digs it up. She's got lots of pamphlets, and even a seven-page copy of the Weed Control Act, but she hasn't actually got anyone who's willing to go out with her and start digging.

"The Ministry of Transportation didn't want anything to do with it and said take it to the Ministry of Natural Resources. The MNR told me to phone the purple loosestrife hotline and the hotline told me to take it to the landfill. But you know what our landfills are like. A raven would open the bag and spread all the seeds."

On paper, purple loosestrife is a noxious weed, and therefore under the jurisdiction of a local government's weed control officer, who can force the land's owner to get rid of it. But what happens when the loosestrife is on provincial property? How do you get the government to clean up its act?

Purple loosestrife:

Height: 3-6 feet (1-2 metres)

Stalk: square, woody, several stocks per plant

Leaves: smooth edges, opposite sides of stalk, attached directly to stalk

Flowers: long pink/purple spike, June to Sept.

does at least have lots of informational pamphlets which describe loosestrife. Then, you should report the location to the Canadian Wildlife Federation, 1-800-565-6305, which is tracking down the spread of the plant. To get rid of the plant, most herbicides won't work, and there's the potential of killing other plants and wildlife. There is a beetle which will eat the plant, but Peterson is worried it will eat her other plants, too, so she won't use it. Instead, she says to cover the plant with a garbage bag and then dig up the root, preferably before it goes to seed in mid-summer. The Canadian Wildlife Federation then says to place all plant matter in a carton or protected site so it can dry completely without danger of being spread by wind, water, human or animal activity.

Once totally dried, the plant matter can be burned, packaged for disposal or composted. When burning, make sure all plant matter is destroyed. When packaging, wrap securely in a plastic bag or container to avoid contamination at land fill-sites. When composting, make sure all matter is totally dried first so living material isn't spread to other landscaping sites.

And if you'd like to join Peggy Peterson in her battle, call her at Green Tapestry Gardens, 705-766-2622.

Cottage notes

Fire permits no longer needed, but safety precautions still apply

It will no longer be necessary to hold a permit for most types of burning, under changes proposed by the Ministry of Natural Resources.

However, anyone using an incinerator or burning wood, brush, grass and leaves will still be expected to follow the MNR's basic safety precautions.

According to the MNR's proposed burning regulations, a permit will not be required to burn piled wood, brush or discarded wood products if:

- the fire is tended by a responsible person until it is out;
 - the pile is less than two metres in diameter and less than two metres high;
 - the fire is ignited two hours before sunset, or later, and is extinguished two hours after sunrise, or earlier;
 - the fire is at least two metres from any flammable materials;
 - the person has adequate tools or water to contain the fire.
- a permit will not be required to burn grass and leaves, if:
- the fire is tended by a responsible person until it is out;
 - the area to be burned is less than one hectare;
 - the length of the flaming edge is less than 30 metres;
 - the fire is ignited two hours before sunset, or later, and is extinguished two hours after sunrise, or earlier;
 - the person has adequate tools or water to contain the fire.

Incinerators will not require permits, if they are:

- enclosed devices;
- at least five metres from any forest;
- at least two metres from flammable materials;
- covered by mesh less than five millimetres in size;
- a responsible person monitors the fire until it is out.

If a Restricted Fire Zone is put in place because of a high fire hazard, these fires will not be allowed.

The MNR will still require and issue permits for larger and more complicated burning.

Municipalities are responsible for wildland fire and outdoor burning within municipal boundaries and, for a number of reasons, may choose to pass a more restrictive by-law or a by-law requiring permits.

Further information about permit changes is available by calling the MNR's Haliburton fire base at 457-2107.

Guide offers environment-friendly boating tips

by JODY LINDBECK
Staff Reporter

As they skim across area lakes and rivers enjoying the waterways, many boaters leave more behind than just a wake.

They may also leave chemicals, sewage, garbage and other forms of pollution that are damaging to the environment and harmful to wildlife.

In many cases, boaters may not even be aware of the environmental toll their recreation can take on the waterways.

But the Canadian Power and Sail Squadrons, in co-operation with Environment Canada and the Ministry of the Environment and Energy, has published a new booklet to correct that.

"The Enviro Boater Guide" offers tips and suggestions for environment-friendly boating in a humorous but informative format.

Local illustrator Robert Van Nood designed the book and drew all of the cartoons that appear in its 20 pages.

Among other topics, the book offers recommendations on:

- Cleaning boats without adding harmful detergents and chemicals to waterways;
- Preventing the production of "grey water" containing phosphates;
- Making sure your boat fuel doesn't contaminate waterways;
- Exercising care while boating to protect animal nesting areas, spawning grounds and habitat.

Copies of "The Enviro Boater Guide" can be ordered by calling 1-888-277-2628 or by writing Canadian Power and Sail Squadrons, 26 Golden Gate Court, Scarborough, Ont., M1P 3A5.

A way of seeing:

Naturalist R. D. Lawrence casts a keen eye on nature in his new book

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

Most people can never see the forest for the trees. But R. D. Lawrence, the naturalist and author who makes his home in the Highlands, can sometimes even miss the trees. His eyes are too busy encompassing all the minutiae of this complex and fascinating micro-universe.

He doesn't see just trees. He sees living organisms. Each branch and leaf is clearly distinct and as he pictures the roots digging deep into the soil, he sees the history of the very ground he's walking on. The life-giving juices pump through the tree as if exposed by x-ray.

A tree just isn't a tree. Even in death, it's a giver of life, part of the on-going cycle of nature which has been fine-tuned over millions of years. It could be a home for endless insects, a burrowing place for animals, a refuge for prey.

A fallen tree is a place to sit and rest while listening the multitudes of sounds in the forest. Who cares about such esoteric questions such as what is the sound of one hand clapping. What is the sound that a rabbit makes as it gently lands on the fallen leaves? Is the chipmunk chattering at you or some other intruder? What other intruder? And by the sound of the wolves' howls, the pack must be only a quarter mile away.

It's as if Lawrence was born with a set of binoculars planted within his eyes, allowing him to see everything close up and in tiny detail. It also helps that in his long and varied career as a naturalist and writer, he's always kept fastidious notes.

"Now, the sun is already on its way down, highlighting the tops of the trees with incandescent orange and yellow hues that slant skyward," he writes in his latest curled, dead leaves that carpet the boreal floor. And then I look up, at the naked crowns of poplars and at the larches, which shed all their needles about one week ago. Their condition advertises the imminent arrival of winter. This, then, I believe, is the last day of autumn. It is the time I always think of as the paean to the fall season, when, with a final blast of riotous colour, the wilderness makes ready for winter. But we, that is to say, the wilderness and I, have to wait for Boreas to finish inhaling before he can release his and Matilda the skunk. And then there are the chapters in which he is the preacher, spreading the message of conservation and preservation.

Many regular Echo readers will recognize some of the stories, and with good reason. Some were originally written for the summer editions of County Life, and then fine-tuned and updated for the book. (It's always such a pleasant surprise to come across a mention of a familiar place or person, such as Dr. Laurie Brown, whose veterinary expertise has been a source of relief and pride for the Lawrences during their years in the Highlands.)

Some chapters provide a synopsis of stories told in his dozens of other books. One chapter allows his wife and full-time partner, Sharon, an opportunity to have her care and compassion acknowledged by a worldwide audience.

For Lawrence wannabes, the final chapter is particularly informative because it gives advice and practical lessons on how to care for injured or abandoned wildlife. As the other chapters so amply illustrate, Lawrence certainly knows of what he speaks.

But all stories try

"It is not necessary to be a biologist to appreciate the beauty and peace of the undisturbed natural world, or to feel the joy and peace of watching animal life in action,"

R.D. Lawrence concludes book, a collection of observations called A Shriek in the Forest Night. "As I watch the colours, I hear the geese honk. The gaggle is behind me, but moving in my direction. I turn, looking up, and moments later a large flock of Canadas arrow above me, dark silhouettes moving swiftly below the coloured sky, every member honking farewell. Soon they are gone, out of sight and out of hearing. And suddenly, or so it seems, dusk is trading places with the sun.

"I look at the ground, at the frost-laden breath upon the land and on all the living things that dwell on it, above it, and under its surface."

This excerpt is from the book's second-to-last chapter, entitled "Spirit of the Wilderness." Here, Lawrence writes like a poet, exploring what it is about nature which so captures his soul. In other chapters he is the scientist, coolly investigating nature's unsolved puzzles. In others yet he is a humorist, entertaining his readers with the endearing tales of Paddy the beaver, otters Slip and Slide, to teach us more about our natural world, and why we should see not only the forests and trees, but all the living creatures and organisms that make it thrive. And delight us whenever we take the time to see what's really there.

"It is not necessary to be a biologist to appreciate the beauty and peace of the undisturbed natural world, or to feel the joy and peace of watching animal life in action," he concludes in the chapter called To Kill or Not to Kill. "If we begin to understand the influences that govern all life forms – the sun and the moon, the atmosphere, the oceans and tides, the rivers and lakes, the rains and snows, the forests and the soil, the planets that surround us, and finally, our neighbours the animals and the plants – we are already more than halfway toward our goal: the tranquillity and pleasure that result from such an acquaintance with nature that will urge us to share it with others, especially with our children. It will also make us want to conserve the environment so that it may last for all time."

Here we are with another May 24th weekend approaching and that means a lot of things. Friends with cottages will be up to open them up. Friends without cottages may want to get out of the city so they come to the beautiful Haliburton Highlands. It is a weekend to relax and have fun with friends and family after the long and drawn out winter. Whoever is around the house will need to be fed and the hosts shouldn't have to spend the whole weekend in the kitchen. Here are a few suggestions to add to the menu without adding too much time at the stove.

Cheese Buns

These are great to have in the fridge for snacks, light lunches or late nut munching.

1 can of flaked tuna
1 cup grated cheddar cheese
3 hard boiled eggs
5 green olives chopped
1/4 cup each of chopped onion, celery and green pepper enough mayonnaise to moisten

1 dozen small dinner rolls
Mix all ingredients well. Add salt and pepper to taste. Spoon mixture into split rolls, and wrap in foil. May prepared up to a day in advance. When ready to use, heat in 325F oven for approximately 30 minutes or until cheese begins to melt.

Cauliflower Salad

Another great make-ahead that just gets better as it ages.

1 head cauliflower, separated into flowerettes
4 sweet red peppers, diced
4 sweet green peppers, diced
Herb Dressing:
1/2 cup oil
1/4 cup red wine vinegar
2 Tbsp. prepared mustard
1 clove garlic, crushed
1 Tbsp. salt

2 Tbsp. white sugar
1 egg
1/2 tsp. each dried basil, oregano, tarragon and rosemary

Toss all ingredients together in large bowl and marinate overnight, stirring periodically. Serves 6-8.

Spicy Sausage Ragout

Since we can't always count on the weather to be warm and sunny, it is nice to have something that can heat us up if we need it. This variation on traditional spaghetti sauce is a nice change and can be made in just a few minutes. Serve over pasta of your choice with a salad and crusty buns.

1 Tbsp. olive oil
1 1/2 lb sweet Italian sausage, sliced
1 1/2 lb hot Italian

sausage, sliced
1 large onion, chopped
3 cloves garlic, minced
3 green peppers, cut in slivers
1 can (28 oz.) plum tomatoes, undrained
1 cup tomato sauce
1/2 cup chopped fresh parsley

1/2 dry red wine
1/2 tsp. each dried oregano and basil
salt and pepper

In large pot or Dutch oven heat oil; saute sausages until browned. Add onion and garlic; cook for 5 minutes or until softened. Stir in peppers; cook for 5 minutes or until tender. Stir in tomatoes, sauce, parsley, wine, oregano, basil and salt and pepper to taste; simmer, uncovered for 30 minutes or until heated through and flavours have mingled. Can be prepared ahead and refrigerated at this point. Reheat when needed and serve over pasta. Serves 6.

Fresh Apple Cake

A gooey concoction that is excellent for brunch, with ice cream for dessert or just when you crave a sweet. High calories but yummy.

2 cups sugar
2 eggs
1 cup corn oil
3 cups flour
1 tsp baking soda
1 tsp baking powder
2 tsp vanilla
3 cups diced apples
1 cup chopped nuts
Sauce: 1 cup margarine
1 cup brown sugar
1/4 cup milk

Beat together sugar, eggs and oil. Add dry ingredients gradually, beating well after each addition. Add vanilla, apples and nuts. This makes a thick batter. Pour into greased 9x13" pan. Bake for 40-50 minutes at 350F.

While cake bakes, mix sauce ingredients and bring to boil. Boil 3-4 minutes until thickened. Prick baked cake with fork and spread sauce on warm cake. Leave to cool. Warm 10-15 minutes before serving.

From the heart:

Young poet April Hawco lets words speak feelings

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

IT CAN BE pretty tough being a kid, especially when you're just beginning that journey towards becoming an adult.

But 13-year-old April Hawco knows that it's not good to bury your emotions and feelings. If you do, they might come out in bad ways, such as yelling at people or getting sad.

So when she's consumed by feelings, she sits down and gets those feelings out on paper.

April has written 37 poems, and she's collected several of them in a self-published anthology called "Poems Written by the Heart."

"It's just natural," she says of her aptitude for poetry.

A few years ago, she was writing stories, but then a co-op student at J. Douglas Hodgson Elementary School introduced her to poetry and April hasn't written a story since.

She finds poetry to be a wonderful way to cope with the stresses of being a teenager. "I get depressed sometimes and when I write it gets my feelings out instead of being bottled up... You can talk openly (in poetry). Instead of being tight inside you can be open."

Poems are about "family, friends and things I want to be."

The following poem "is about a day that can't turn bad because it's such a good day. All my luck's come."

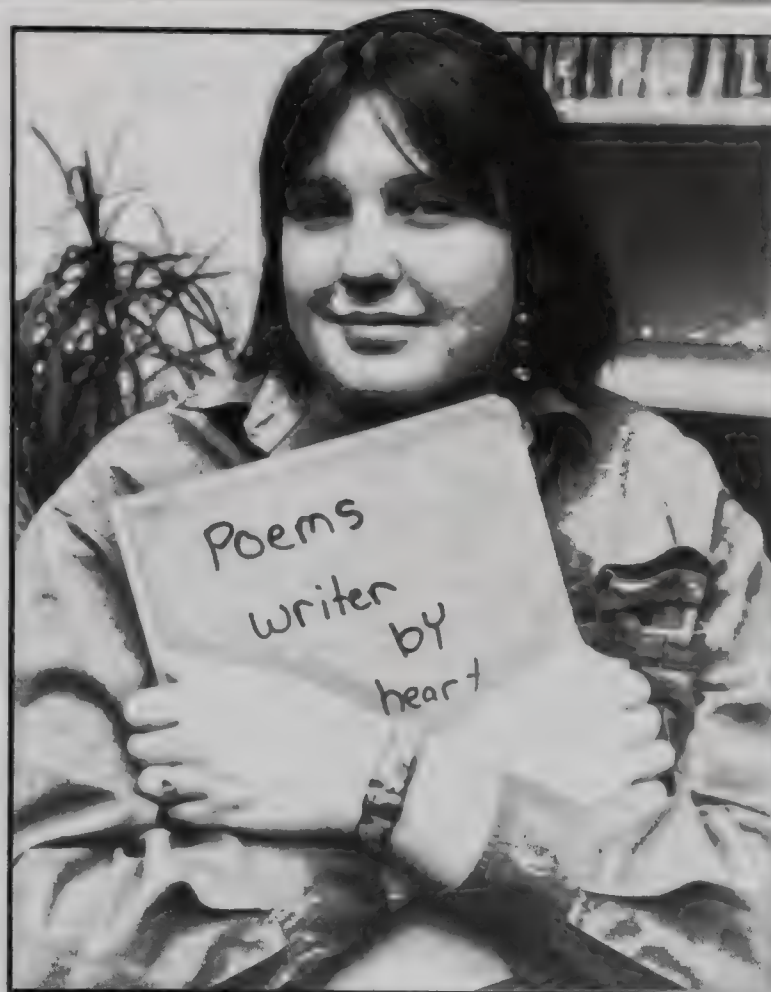

THE SEED

A seed is dropped. A stem is growing

Leaves are budding. Petals are blooming

The Colour comes out so fresh and bright
